Comment Reasons:

Comment: Until very recently I've been a resident of Chorlton and Stretford, with only a couple of periods away from the towns, since 1990. It's appalling that Ryebank Fields is even being considered for this kind of development, even in the face of such vehement public opposition. It isn't only that the land isn't suitable for this type of use. It's that planners and Council members have dealt with it so badly from the start. To ignore the existing residents and to rip the community apart like this, reeks of corruption at the highest levels. There are palms being greased to get this across the line and it shows. You must have such a low opinion of the people this will affect most negatively. Your only reply seems to be "We don't care what anyone else thinks". And the only thing that influences people to think that way is, you guessed it, cash. It's a disgrace. Here we go again.
