Description of area

The semi-detached property is located on a busy residential street; there are other semi-detached properties on the street of the same style and detached properties opposite. There is a carport/canopy side extension that runs the full extent of the driveway from the front elevation to rear elevation of the dwelling, joining to a single storey existing outrigger. Beyond the carport is an existing dual pitched garage. The property to the rear at No. 13 Crimsworth Avenue has a large garden outbuilding that occupies almost the full width for the garden at No. 157.

Description of development

The applicant is seeking a certificate of proposed lawful development for a single storey outbuilding to provide home office, w.c and storage/utility space. The existing garage to the rear of the property is proposed to be demolished.

Consultations & Notification Responses

None Required - There is no statutory requirement to consult third parties including neighbours; views expressed by third parties on the planning merits of the case, or on whether the applicant has any private rights to carry out the operation, use or activity in question, are irrelevant when determining the application.

Legislative Issues

Sections 191 and 192 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 provide for anyone (not just a person with a legal interest in the land) to apply to the local planning authority (LPA) for a lawful development certificate (LDC). A certificate is a statutory document certifying:

(1) in the case of an application under section 191, the lawfulness, for planning purposes, of existing operations on, or use of land, or some activity being carried out in breach of a planning condition; or

(2) in the case of an application under section 192, the lawfulness of proposed operations on, or use of land.

The onus of proof in regard to (1) is firmly on the applicant and the issue of a certificate will depend on the on factual evidence provided about the history and planning status of the building or other land and the interpretation of any relevant planning law or judicial authority. The relevant test of the evidence in this matter is “the balance of probability” and the applicants own evidence does not need to be corroborated by independent evidence. If the LPA have no evidence to contradict the applicants version of events or make them less then probable, there is no good reason to refuse the issue of a certificate.

In regard to (2), this provides that, if the LPA are supplied with information satisfying them that the use or operations described in the application would be lawful, if instituted or begun at the time of the application, they shall issue a certificate to that effect; and, in any other case, they shall refuse the application.

In short, the purpose section 192 is to enable any person who wishes to find out whether any proposed use or operations would be lawful to apply to the LPA for that purpose.

The application needs to describe the proposal with sufficient clarity and precision to enable the LPA to understand (from a written description and plans) exactly what is involved in the proposal; and to submit whatever supporting information or legal submission that are to be relied upon in order to satisfy the LPA that a certificate should be granted for the proposal.

In making their decision on an application under section 192, the LPA ask themselves the hypothetical question - "If this proposed change of use had already occurred, or if this proposed operation had commenced, on the application date, would it have been lawful for planning purposes?" In doing so, the LPA will not only consider whether the proposal would involve "development" requiring an application for planning permission, but whether it would involve a breach of any existing condition or limitation imposed on a grant of planning permission which has been acted upon, and which therefore constrains what can be done on the land. The LPA will not make a proposal fit a scenario; the only question is whether the proposal made by the applicant is lawful at the time of submission.

The Application

This application is pursued under subsection (1) of section 192, which provides for an application to determine whether any proposed use or operations would be lawful for planning purposes.

The Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) (England) Order 2015 (as amended) (GPDO); Article 3 and Schedule 2, Part 1, Class E grants planning permission for buildings etc. incidental to the enjoyment of a dwellinghouse. This ‘permitted development right’ is subject to limitations and conditions.

Class E grants permission for:

The provision within the curtilage of the dwellinghouse of –

(a) any building or enclosure, swimming or other pool required for a purpose incidental to the enjoyment of the dwellinghouse as such, or the maintenance, improvement or other alteration of such a building or enclosure; [my emphasis]

Where the proposed new building is to be "...for a purpose incidental to the enjoyment of the dwellinghouse..." it is required to comply with the limitations of Class E; sub-paragraphs (a) through to (k) make it clear where such development would not be permitted. For the purposes of the Order, a building is defined as including any structure or erection and includes any part of a building.

The building proposed and as depicted in the plan accompanying the application, namely that referenced 0197-PA-003 Rev A and dated 24 February 2025, appears to satisfy those requirements of sub-paragraphs (a) through to (k) and actually goes further with a proposed use of materials to match the existing dwellinghouse as so annotated on the proposed plan.

Notwithstanding the findings as to whether the operation development could be undertaken, the GPDO at Article 3, Schedule 2, Part 1, Class E, grants planning approval for the use of an outbuilding within the curtilage of a dwelling where it is "...required for a purpose incidental to the enjoyment of the dwellinghouse as such". In the context of a dwelling, an incidental purpose is generally regarded as being a subordinate activity connected with the running of the dwelling or with the domestic or leisure activities of the persons living in it.

The Government has produced a document entitled Permitted development rights for house holders Technical Guidance (September 2019) and this advises that the term "incidental" does not "...cover normal residential uses, such as separate self-contained accommodation or the use of an outbuilding for primary living accommodation such as a bedroom, bathroom, or kitchen."

Relevant case law has established that in Class E, "required" for an incidental purpose should be interpreted as "reasonably required" and does not rest on the unrestrained whim of a householder. The physical size of an outbuilding, alone or in relation to a dwelling, is not conclusive; it is necessary to identify the purpose and incidental quality in relation to the enjoyment of the dwelling and evaluate whether the outbuilding is genuinely and reasonably required in order to accommodate the proposed use or activity and thus achieve that purpose [Emin v SSE & Mid Sussex DC [1989] JPL 909]. In other words, if the use of a space was fundamental to the ordinary day to day functioning of the dwelling it would not be incidental, but form part of the primary accommodation.

The proposed layout drawing accompanying the application shows the interior of the outbuilding as being formed by four separate rooms with the "WC" sitting centrally between two equally sized rooms, one described as a "Home Office" and the other as "Storage/Utilities", each being accessed by the central entrance hall. The building overall provides a footprint of 30m². Whilst there is no indication as to the proposed facilities to be installed in the room annotated "WC", the room is approximately 1.8m x 1.9m, giving a floor space of 3.42m²; this providing ample space to accommodate a standard rectangular straight bath measuring (L)1700mm (W)700m, together with sink and toilet.

The applicant has provided no supporting information beyond the accompanying plan and whilst a "Home Office" and "Storage/Utilities" would not usually be part of primary living accommodation, they are capable in principle of being incidental to the enjoyment of the dwellinghouse. However, the Technical Guidance refers to a bathroom as forming primary accommodation and it is not clear in this application why a “WC” provision is reasonably required as an ancillary function to ether the “Home Office” or the provision of any additional “Storage/Utilities”.

In addition, there is no explanation by the applicant why space in the house cannot be used to accommodate a “Home Office”, this being closer to existing facilities and thereby requiring a building only for the provision of “Storage/Utilities” and no need for a “WC” in the garden.

On the evidence accompanying the application, it has not been shown that, on the balance of probabilities, the outbuilding is genuinely and reasonably required for purposes incidental to the enjoyment of the dwellinghouse. Accordingly, it would not be permitted development falling within Schedule 2, Part 1, Class E of the GPDO and the certificate of lawfulness should therefore be refused.

Other Legislative Requirements
Equality Act 2010

Section 149 (Public Sector Equality Duty) of the Equality Act 2010 requires due regard to the need to: Eliminate unlawful discrimination, harassment and victimisation and other conduct prohibited by the Act and; Advance equality of opportunity between persons who share a protected characteristic and persons who do not share it. The Equality Duty does not impose a legal requirement to conduct an Equality Impact Assessment. Compliance with the Equality Duty involves consciously thinking about the aims of the Equality Duty as part of the process of decision-making.

Human Rights Act 1998 considerations

This application needs to be considered against the provisions of the Human Rights Act 1998. Under Article 6, the applicants (and those third parties, including local residents, who have made representations) have a right to a fair hearing and to this end the local planning authority must give full consideration to their comments.

Protocol 1 Article 1, and Article 8 where appropriate, confer(s) a right of respect for a person’s home, other land and business assets. In taking account of all material considerations, including Council policy as set out in the Core Strategy and saved polices of the Unitary Development Plan, the Director of Planning, Building Control & Licensing has concluded that some rights conferred by these articles on the applicant(s)/objector(s)/resident(s) and other occupiers and owners of nearby land that might be affected may be interfered with but that that interference is in accordance with the law and justified by being in the public interest and on the basis of the planning merits of the development proposal. She believes that any restriction on these rights posed by the recommendation given is proportionate to the wider benefits of and that such a decision falls within the margin of discretion afforded to the Council under the Town and Country Planning Acts.

Recommendation: Refuse

Condition(s) to be attached to decision for approval OR Reasons for recommendation to refuse

1. On the evidence accompanying the application, it has not been shown that, on the balance of probabilities, the outbuilding is genuinely and reasonably required for purposes incidental to the enjoyment of the dwellinghouse. Accordingly, it would not be permitted development falling within Schedule 2, Part 1, Class E of The Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) (England) Order 2015 (as amended).
