

6.3.8 Potential

There are no known prehistoric sites within the Site or its vicinity and the potential for remains deriving from this period is considered to be very low. Similarly, there are no known Roman or medieval sites within the Site or its immediate environs, and the potential of remains from these periods is considered to be low.

The Site has the potential contain the remains of an early-nineteenth-century cottage that has been highlighted as an area of archaeological potential (Fig. 11). The investigation of traditional farms expanding in an urban environment during this period has been recognised as a legitimate avenue of research. Clarence Cottage is shown on the first available map of the area (Fig. 3) and the positioning of buildings on Johnson's map suggest that it may have been on the Site as early as 1818. The survival of remains associated with the cottage may have the potential to address the research agendas set out in the Archaeological Research Framework for North West England (Newman and McNeil 2007; McNeil and Newman 2007; <https://researchframeworks.org/nwrf/>), including Initiative 7:13:

"Produce a regional study of farming in the period 1750-1950 that examines areas of continuity and change and highlights areas of rare, regionally specific and innovative practices."

(<https://researchframeworks.org/nwrf/the-industrial-and-modern-period/#section-21>)

There is also the potential for the remains of Clarence cottage to contribute to wider research questions posed in the framework, including Research Question Ind06:

"How did the industrial farm evolve and farming practices develop during this period?"

(<https://researchframeworks.org/nwrf/researchframework/v1/question/question-5e1745f4311d6/>)

6.4 Significance of Below-Ground Archaeological Remains

It can be concluded from the information gained from the desk-based research that the Site is of archaeological interest and may contain remains of local significance. The Site has the potential to contain remains of an early-nineteenth-century cottage that was occupied by local farmers (see Fig 10 and 11).

The Site also has the potential to contain below ground remains of remains of nineteenth-century housing, but this is of little archaeological significance.

7. Impact of Development

7.1 Development Proposals

The design proposals for the Site allow for the construction of a new extension to the existing Manchester Royal Infirmary, including the partial demolition and reconfiguration of existing buildings and external landscaping works. The delivery of the proposals will involve ground-breaking works that have the potential to affect any surviving archaeological remains within the Site.

7.2 Impact of Development on Below-Ground Remains

This assessment has demonstrated that the Site has the potential to contain remains of remains of nineteenth-century housing which would not be significant. Any remains of an early-nineteenth-century cottage that do exist within the Site are likely to be of local significance.

8. Recommendations

8.1 Heritage Assets

The NPPF makes clear that where the loss of the whole or a material part of a non-designated heritage asset's significance is justified by a development, the developer should be required to record that asset and advance understanding of its significance, and to make this evidence publicly accessible.

The assessment has demonstrated that there is potential for the remains of nineteenth-century terraced housing and a public house to survive within the Site. Any such remains, pending the extent of their survival and condition, would merit preservation 'by record'.

8.2 Further Investigation

The scope and extent of any such further investigation will be determined by the Greater Manchester Archaeological Advisory Service (GMAAS), in their capacity as archaeological advisor to Manchester City Council. However, it may be anticipated that further archaeological investigation via a programme of evaluation trenching, particularly within the footprint of Clarence Cottage (Plate 13; Fig. 11), will be required to establish the presence or absence of buried archaeological remains and, if present, their extent and significance.

Should any significant remains be encountered during the initial evaluation, further works in the form of an archaeological excavation may be appropriate to ensure an archival record is compiled prior to the ultimate loss of the remains, in line with the guidance provided by the National Planning Policy Framework.

Appendix 1: Census Return Data

The tables below give details of household names, number of residents per house and the occupations of the residents living at the houses within the immediate area of the Site. The census returns of 1851, 1871, 1891 and 1901 have been included. Any houses that were not listed or were uninhabited have been left blank.
