Comment Reasons:

Comment: I wholeheartedly support this wonderful use of this special wild area. I have been using the fields for over 25 years, as did my two children [REDACTED]. Selfishly they are a peaceful nature filled place to walk and reset mentally, and in themselves they are home to thousands(millions?) of creatures and vegetation. In these times of global climate change we would be very foolish to destroy this urban carbon sink (and water sponge).

Ryebank Fields are hugely loved by a very diverse range of the community and they should be kept so future generations can benefit from their unique wildness in these times of continual urbanisation.

Ryebank Fields are designated Greenfield and there is NO REASON for that status to change. (The area is already swamped with new build creating an even more dense population who will need the fields to escape to).
